Nowhere is Van Eyck's master more on display than in "The Adoration of the Lamb". The presumed patrons of this painting are the Flemish banker Judocus Vijdt and his wife, who on the panel are depicted as worshipping John the Baptist and John the Evangelist. The "Ghent Altarpiece", as it is alternatively known, is located.

Jan van Eyck brings on a revolution in the history of painting in the Low Countries between circa 1420 and 1441. He is probably brought up by his older brother, Hubert, whose Ghent Altarpiece he completes in 1432, following Hubert's death in 1426. Jan van Eyck's work makes an abrupt end to the refined 'international.
